A CHANCE TO REPAIR DAMAGES

The new trade treaty between Canada and France has been proclaimed. That it will improve trade relations is the confident hope at Ottawa, and is to be expected. It could hardly make them have been.

Since the beginning of the former treaty a year ago the two countries have been fighting each to exclude the products of the other, with marked success on both sides. Canada's exports to France for the remaining half of last year amounted to $1,000,000, while imports from Canada for the whole year were down 22 per cent, two-thirds of the loss following repudiation of the treaty. British Columbia's salmon export to France simply stopped when the treaty was concluded.

Under the new treaty British Columbia will have a chance to rebuild this trade, since France is to admit all salmon at the lowest effective rate of duty. While concessions are granted on other and equal terms, Canadian export products is not clear in detail. It is to be supposed they are also drawn with the object of ending the economic war by trade.

If so, the first half of the year's possibilities will be small, but we have a strong hope here in the French republic together with the complete dislocation of trade connections there which will now have to be re-established.

A double feature is in the offing. The treaty is only to run a year, and neither country lodges a protest. If the treaty is what it should be, and is claimed to be, the term should be longer.

ANOTHER ROUND WITH PETER

Peter Virigin has been thrust into the limelight again. He was arrested in Winnipeg on a warrant issued by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police in a closed case of immigration offense and ordered deported. A stay of proceedings was granted, in order that an appeal could be made to Hon. W. A. Gordon, Minister of Immigration, whose deputy stated his action.

The specific complaint is that Virigin is an alien residing in Canada after having been convicted on a criminal charge. There is nothing new in that. He was convicted a year ago, and has been residing in Canada ever since, part of the time in the Prince

That is the real, and the only, ground upon which his deportation is being sought; it is strange that proceedings were not taken sooner. For instance, he has been traveling about Canada as he willed. He could have been deported on the ground now alleged, the day after the Halifax judge turned him loose.

It is to be hoped that Peter has been fully allowed freedom on probation since he was released, with the intention that he should not be further molested if he kept clear of further illegal acts, and that he is suspected now of having committed none. The meaning of the term "deportation" has had action of the courts only adds another and obscure chapter to the serious record of their dealings with Peter.

In any event, it is to be hoped particular care will be taken this time to give Peter all the opportunity he deserves to prove his right to remain in his right to stay in Canada. The former attempt to kidnap and railroad him out of the country was more than a plenty of kind of procedure. What happens to Peter may be very important.

It is to the public interest that the law be administered in Canada in the spirit and letter of fairness, and not by "strong arm" methods.

THE "GROW LESS WHEAT" POLICY

Premier Bracken explains that the governments of the prairie provinces took upon themselves the responsibility of this. Premier Bracken to angle at the London conference for a "greenback" among the most exporting countries to restrict the acreage in each of them that may be needed to wheat.

The three prairie provinces, at the recent international wheat conference at Geneva and London, where Mr. Ferguson, representing Canada, undertook to line up the exporting countries in an agreement of the kind. Only, by the way, to promptly inform that Australia would have nothing to do with the scheme. Mr. Ferguson's own action on instructions from Ottawa, instructions which Ottawa formulated at the suggestion and with the approval of the prairie governments.

The prairie governments, according to him, the Canadian wheat grower financially compelling him to grow less wheat. If growers in other exporting countries are similarly restrained by law. That, in the light of Mr. Bracken's statement, is to be accepted as the policy of the Dominion Government and the three prairie provincial governments.

The responsibility these four governments have thus assumed is rather large, and when a good many involved problems to be solved. These will appear in due course if and as the program is translated into practice. If the master is pressed it is fairly likely to be to remain in a federal and non-partisan, general elections.

On the bald question of restriction there cannot be much room for argument. If less wheat were grown in the world the price of wheat would go up; that is, the law of supply and demand. The cutting down the acreage of exporting countries only would shorten the world supply enough to raise the price to a level that would compensate the grower for his loss. The point is that such a result has occurred in Europe in the last five years suggests that something quite different might happen. The countries there which formerly imported wheat in enormous quantities have been importers but in recent years have begun to export at some point. They have done so by adopting all sorts of unorthodox devices, such as bonuses, sky high tariffs, and quotas. But the point is that they have done it and are doing it.

The point is that the countries that have done this are not all grown in the exporting countries. If the exporting countries arbitrarily cut down production there is at least a pretty strong hint that the importing countries would speed up production and the export with a possibly reduced surplus but that would not be the case. That would be several times worse than the present situation.

If restriction is to accomplish the end of higher prices, it must be assumed that the exporting countries will take non-exporting countries and get a good price for their wheat rather than resort to artificial means to stimulate home production. According to Mr. Bracken's explanation, four Canadian governments have overlocked that of production entirely in framing their plans to curtail production in Canada and other exporting countries.

Farmers Demand Action

CO-OPERATIVE AGENCY WANTS HELP OF U.S.

Protest Against Argument That Nature Does Done Duty

CHICAGO, June 13.—Director of the Farmers' National Grain Corporation has a resolution, marketing agency, Monday demanded the United States government set in motion immediately the relief measures of the Agricultural Adjustment Act.

The resolution, the session here, also adopted a resolution asking the agency to complete its investigation of administration of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and to submit a agricultural trust and commodity exchanges.

"We demand," the resolution said, "against arguments that nature has taken care of our farm surplus problem, that the government must be taken to sustain a parity price level."

"Notwithstanding our short crop of the last year, we demand that we will be on an export basis to a large extent and with no support, that the price of our farm product will be toward the world price level, and that acreage in 1934

"make an additional acreage in 1934."

"We earnestly urge that the allotment plan be adopted and every effort be made to get the machinery created by the act in motion immediately."

$12,000 Set Aside To Meet Riverdale Claims Of $58,251

City council will hold a special meeting at 4:30 p.m. Thursday to determine whether the sum of $12,000 set aside by the provincial government to meet claims made by Riverdale district property-owners following damage caused by mining subsidence, in the area of a new road, laid at council's regular meeting Monday evening.

Police said the sum was given last month by public advertisement and was to be used to meet subsidence damage due to the subsidence within the area defined to be the mining subsidence zone.

The assembly placed its seal of approval on the financial report of the town trust fund for the year ending June 30, 1932, at a meeting held in Toronto. It showed a deficit last year of $36,432. At the same time, expenses were reduced to the minimum and the accumulated deficit of the church was reduced by $17,693.

While the church is better than it was a year ago, and its assets are improved, the town trust fund is still in the red.

Mr. Petton disagreed, claiming the deficit last year was $17,693, and the church was better than it was a year ago, and its assets are improved, the town trust fund is still in the red.

The amount of the damage was represented by the various claims presented.

Every year the church property represents a decreased budget, and in previous years, the church has been unable to meet the deficit.

Mr. Petton said the church was going further into debt to meet the deficit, and the town trust fund was below $1,000 the minimum stipend for ministers.

Mr. Petton said the church had been given a loan of $1,000 by the church budget, and that James Dutton, Peiterboro, chairman of the budget committee, claimed the church had been given a loan of $143,169 to $366,582. There were 219 congregations in the church, but only 983 made contributions.

DATANS

The public investigation being held into the alleged disorder following in the final game of the series between Commercial Grade and the Edmonton Oldtimers convinced that every fair-minded person that there was no violence that could be construed as objectionable in the conduct of any of the teams. That the result of the committee's findings to date is shared by all really impartial fans can be seen in the letter received from Joseph A. Clark, business manager of the baseball team of the city's most ardent sport boosters, which is reproduced here:

Edmonton, Alta., June 10, 1933.

To the Sports Editor of Edmonton Journal.

Sir:—When so much has been written about so much more has been said, about our now "notorious" international ladies' basketball team, that I may as well add that I am a rank outsider, should attempt to add my two cents' worth to the general discussion. I did not attend the prying or probing of this controversy if it were not for the fact that, as just one of the group of persons involved, it helps to pay the freight for all athletes, feel that one or two points of view which I might be interested have been entirely overlooked by the sport writers and by the officials, stated by both teams.

It would probably be thought that I was not I, would come before from one 25 or 35 years younger than I am, and have continued since 1934, attended 99 per cent of all "major" sports events in this and every class of them that were within 100 miles of where I happened to be.

Now, I am not playing Let's bridge or backgammon; nobody else is very much interested, and if I can't make any arrangements that each team should bring one official (with two needed), and one anything else, did go along, one was very much affected, and the unsatisfactory official would be masked from me, I have been prevented from doing anything further than those things that brought him into disrepute.

BALLS & BISSES

Breaking bats open a bag full of tricks. Young Liberals completely disorganized the Arrow. Buses in the fifth inning to pound out a 14-7 decision over the bus men and also put the bus team to the test. The league leaders in an exhibition game at Boyle Street Monday night.

It was like a win for the Arrows who were beaten by the batters pounced Wynn for four hits and five runs in the third inning, but home runs in the fifth inning to be outlasted and the Grits started back to the bus men in the last of the third inning.

Unleashing a vicious attack on the bus team, the Young Liberals clouted the Arrow hurler for two hits and they displayed real bawhawing, hitting the ball hard and generally fooling their foemen to take a six run lead.

In the fifth, the fifth inning for Coach Dorey's boys, and although the politicians brought home right again they only collected two hits.

"Lefty" Pearce came to the rescue for the bus men, but the bus team had the last laugh. Pearce weakened. Pearce also was pulled in the fifth after walking four men and committing two errors. Lloyd Cunningham went on the mound in place of Pearce to end a disastrous inning for the bus men.

Rusty Wynn, who had been under the gun during the exhibition, weakened. Pearce also was pulled in the fifth after walking four men and committing two errors. Lloyd Cunningham went on the mound in place of Pearce to end a disastrous inning for the bus men.

Only in one late inning did the Arrows make a desperate attempt to come back, but the best they could do was to count two runs. Lupus was credited with hitting both runs, but by then it was long double to the right field gardens.

The only circuit drive of the night was made by Parker, who put plenty of weight behind his bat but the ball was far out of the ballpark.

With the two long boys, they were the only batters with Roberson, Cullen and Lupus combined with a two base hit each. Stoen was the only one the only one to sack the Arrows.

Errors and bad plays caused the Arrows to crumble before the Liberals, who were only credited with two earned runs out of their 14.

U.S. Senate Now Orders Inquiry Into Racketeering

PROBE SET IN BIGGER CITIES

WASHINGTON, June 13.—An investigation of racketeering was ordered Monday by the United States Senate and will get under way almost immediately.

Sen. Frank C. LaFollette, author of the legislation authorizing the inquiry and chairman of the sub-committee in charge of it, announced that the Senate's first probe will be directed at racketeering in New York, Detroit and Chicago, and in its Interstate operations.

This century old mill near Almonte, Ontario, was converted into a residence by Dr. J. H. McKenzie, a noted Canadian sculptor (inset). The mill is situated on Indian River in historic Lanark county. Dr. McKenzie will continue his work at the old mill—work which has already won him world acclaim.

CULBERTSON TO FACE LAW SUIT

NEW YORK, June 13.—E. Hall Culbertson, Pittsburgh bridge tender, filed a suit against Eliot Ness in supreme court Monday to determine his right to retain his bidding commission system.

Culbertson issued a statement saying he had "brought this suit against Ness because the time has come when it must be made to understand that one man owns the bidding commission system and because any efforts that anyone makes to stop me will not racketeer the game must be stopped."
